New laws require action

Lecal communities are moving dangerously slow in plotting strategy for living within the recycling laws that the into effect in four months.

For example, on July 1, landfills will no longer be accepting yard waste. Yet, not one community in our coverage area has made substantial progress toward establishing any kind of composting program of its own. Come springtime, residents will be placing grass clippings at the curb. Frankly, homeowners won't stand for not being able to continue to do so. Some people will find spots on their own property for storing dead grass, but not everyone will have the luxury of room. Others will dump the grass where some wouldn't want it.

Madison County has studied the waste issue at length and only last week was able to approve a long-range solid waste plan. However, that plan calls for such things as incineration — which could take years — and doesn't address composting at all. Yard waste is considered by the county to be a problem for individual towns.

Laidlaw Waste Systems, which provides trash-hauling services for many local cities, has applied to the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency for a permit to build a 23-acre composting facility near its Edwardsville-area leandfill, but who knows how long or even if that application will be approved.

will be approved.

Eventually, some system of solutions will arise, but we vould hate to see a system derived from pressure. Those kinds of solutions end up being more trouble than the problem was in the first place.

Other towns will be looking to cities like Granite City for leadership. We urge city fathers to tackle this problem quickly and thoughtfully.

Strong transit leadership

Strong leadership is being shown by Metro East transit district boards in meeting transportation challenges facing southwestern Illinois and the bi-state St. Louis area. The St. Clair Transit Board has just voted to spend $250,000 in reserve funds to assist with planning and promotion of joint military-civillan use of Scott Air Force Base. The action matches that taken in December by the Madison County Transit Board.

The St. Clair district also pledged this month to enthusiastically support extending the planned Metro Link lightrafi commuter system from East St. Louis to the Scott/Belleville area. The basic line will connect East St. Louis with downtown St. Louis, St. Louis County and Lambert Airport.

Such efforts can accommodate and course growth.

Airport.
Such efforts can accommodate and cause growth. In south efforts can accommodate and cause growth. In combination with highway travel, river shipping and bus service, the new rail and air links can strengthen the afready outstanding transportation facilities in this, the heart of the Midwest and the nation.

Exciting, tangible progress

The annual Progress edition in yesterday's Journal and today's Press-Record is well named.

There is progress: new homes and residential subdivisions; new retail businesses, sites and centers; new, reborn and expanding industries; neighborhood rehabilitation; governmental improvements; enhanced recreational offerings; cultural diversification; and new and improved health, education and financial services.

ational offerings; cuttural array improved health, education and financial services. Potential has become reality, as shown by words and pictures. There are tangible employment and population uptrends, and the momentum is increasing. A solid base is being created for still greater satisfaction and quality of life in the new decade and then in the new century. Progress? It's wonderful, it's real and it's exciting.

Deal responsibly with lead

I am growing weary of a head-in-the-sand approach to the NL/Taracorp cleanup proposal. I am a resident of the proposed cleanup area.

The EPA did not make the site toxic. Whether EPA stays or goes, there are incredibly high levels of lead in that pile. The levels will not decrease simply because we somehow divert media attention from it.

Whether our mayor thinks the dirt in our area is as good as any dirt in the world won't carry much weight with future investors or potential homebuyers.

Are we so sure of the allure of our area that we can afford to ignore the perceived health threat of the pile? What will be the economic development theme for our area? "The pile is not as bad as you think" or "Pile, what pile?" Neither seems very marketable.

All this does not deal with the fact the pile may be a serious health risk. I urge politicians to forego their hometown boosterism and deal responsibly with this issue that could dramatically affect our community.

Why the obvious attempt to hide the sign?
I was immediately reminded of a similar attempt to hide the truth in a grave nearly 2,000 years ago just outside of Jerusa-lem. Fortunately, that attempt failed.

Women finding themselves in a crisis situation should be encouraged to contact a crisis pregnancy center for help. It won't cost them a discussion after a brief visit. Not so, after an abortion.

After 15 years as a police officer watching scared young women go to a clinic, I decided to get involved. That is why I helped found the Crisis Pregnancy Centerin Granite City.

After seeing more than 500

Since these services — and they are many — are complete-ly free of charge to anyone, what harm can there be?

Rehab here a test for future

Sy Mike Myer's Staff writer.

GRANITE CITY — Paul Fisk lives right in the middle of East Granite, so his interest in its planned rehabilitation goes beyond his role as an alderman who represents many of its residents. At the same time, he wants to make it clear it is the concept, not location, of neighborhood rehabilitation that is important. "There are other neighborhoods that need the same thing," he said. "I'm glad we're first, but hopefully we're not last." The introduction to the city plan states: "Granite City cannot afford to use up and discard old areas in favor of new development. Hemmed in by natural and political barriers, it is vital to the city's long-term health that it make maximum use of every parcel in the city. Realizing this, the City Council in June of 1889 allotted $215,000 of its community development budget for a program of neighborhood revitalization.

"Because of the magnitude and widevelopment budget for a program of neighborhood revitalization." The concept of the problem (of rundown neighborhoods), the plan ... proposes to target a neighborhood a year for concepter of neighborhood revitalization, said or the plot program the same time as the other alderment or the plot program the same time as the other alderment of the project is limited to supporting it with money and ordinances as needed.

role in the project is limited to supporting it with money and ordinances as needed.

Because the scope of the redevelopment covers all aspects of the neighborhood, from streets to rooftops, the project doesn't fall within an aldermanic committee. Economic Development Director Alan Orthals coordinates the project and reports its progress and needs directly to the entire city council. At the same time, Orthals also reports directly to the residents through public meetings.

"We're not trying to shove our program down their throats," Orthals said. "We're saying, 'Let's try it and if it doesn't work we'll change it.'

We'll change it.'

almost as soon as the first article on its closing appeared in the newspaper.

Right now, Fisk said, plans for the park just call for grass, trees and flowers.

He said there has been discussion of adding a playground for small children. At some point in the future, he said, a need for things like baskethall goals or even a consibility.

hopes to begin transforming the area into a park by the beginning of this year's growing season.

A lot of people have requested a brick from the Webster School building as a souvenir, Fisk said, and he plans to "stack up a couple hundred" in his driveway for those who want them. Another part of the project well under way is the establishment of an Operation Safe Street — a plan to eliminate through traffic in the neighborhood — that has been used extensively and successfully in St. Louis' Central West Ende etitizens and, according to Fisk and Ortbals, is meeting with general approval.

"In St. Louis, streets were literally blocked off with barriers," ortbals said. "I don't think we have to do that. We can accomplish the same kind of thing by creating some one-way streets and limiting turns."

Fisk said his wife didn't like the idea of having to change her route to work at Granite City Steel and he would have to change his route to work at Granite City Steel and he would have to change his route to work at Gentreer's Market, but he and she to the steel of the same time and distance.

ALDERMAN Paul Fisk stands on the future site of a neighborhood park located across from his house.

"It's a matter of having to break a habit," Fisk said. "But Safe Street has worked (in St. Louis), it's cut down on crime and brought neighborhoods together. I think we should give it a chance."

chance."
Since the East Granite street plan doesn't use barriers, Ortbals said, it really will consist only of signs and ordinances that can easily be changed if they don't work.

easily be changed if they don't work.

The key to the rehabilitation program, Fisk and Ortbals agree, will be the neighborhood building inspector. Ortbals is currently interviewing applicants for the job.

Like all building inspectors, the neighborhood inspector will point out what's wrong with the residents' houses, such as needing paint, a new roof, or new siding.

"It is not going to point out a problem unless he also has a solution," Fisk said.

The inspector will help the resident make plans, tell the resident about loan or grant programs available, and help fill out rehabilitation.

"I have one lady I know about in my ward who needs $11,500 for a full rehab," Fisk said. "Her financial situation is such that, under Community Development, all she has to do is live there five years after the repairs and the loan is out-and-out forgiven. I'm sure there are others that qualify for the same type of thing."

I'm sure there are others that qualify for the same type of thing." For less extensive repairs, Don Caughron of Don's Hardware in Granite City is offering East Granite residents a 10 percent discount and free delivery.

"That's on everything," Caughron said. "If we don't have it in the store, we'll order it."

Fisk said a lot of his neighbors have already invested more money in their houses than they could ever hope to get out of them if they were sold. The "bottom line" on repairs, he said, is not to make the houses more valuable but to make them a better place to live.

place to live.

Since announcement of the rehabilitation plan, Fisk said, a neighborhood group has begun to form. He estimates 45-50 people attended its last meeting. The group plans to elect officers at its next meeting — March 5 at Holy Family Church.

"Eventually, I think it will be a group along the lines of the Downtown Neighborhood Restoration Society, hosting different events," Fisk said. "Maybe raise money for flowers or equipment for the park."

Since being singled out for revitalization, the residents of East Granite have become more like neighbors and a neighborhood, according to Fisk.

according to Fisk.

"I'm really excited," Fisk said. "... You know a neighborhood organization is why I got into politics in the first place. I was perfectly happy sitting on my own little lot with my own little house.

"But I got involved in the (now defunct) East Granite Neighborhood Association and here I am."

borhood Association and here I am."
Ortbals said the East Granite revitalization plan is proceeding on schedule and, for the most part, proceeding smoothly.
Fisk said it can't go too fast to suit him.
"Basically, we've been given one year and we've got to make it work." Fisk said. "But think what it would mean to the city if it does work — next year it will be another neighborhood and then another after that and eventually the whole city."

'Paper shower' to aid hygienic needs

The Ladies Club of Holy Family Catholic Church held its February meeting with 34 members attending.

President Pat Knollman presided and the opening prayer was led by Bev Camper.

Several business topics were discussed, including the ongoing sale of Quilt-of-the-Month tickets, reports from the welcoming committee, plus bylaws and the budget.

The following chairmen were opointed: Nursing home birthday party, nnet Oberle; welcoming, Mary ellerman; cards, Mary Ann Ramsey; Quilt-of-the-Month, Knollman and Jinny Connolly; and publicity, Bev Camper.

Knollman introduced Karen Costello of Catholic Charities who presented insight into the non-denominational programs offered by the organization.

Costello explained the group's work with the homeless, youth child abuse and crisis counseling programs.

Costello emphasized the lack in current governmental programs which address personal hygiene needs and it was decided to hold a "personal-paper shower" at the March club meeting.

Catholic Charities will soon open a "clothing closet" of garments to be made available to the needy, it was announced. Help in sorting donated clothing prior to the projected opening is needed, Costello said.

Elva Ortiz was the Quitt-of-the-Month winner and Janet Oberle received the attendance prize. Refreshments were pro-vided by Judy Bucatch, Sue Mell, Diane Siez and Janet Oberle.

Josephine Richardson led the closing prayer.

Despite their lopsided victory in their last meeting, Flyer coach James Moton still feels his team has to produce a solid performance Friday.

"We'll prepare for them the same way we did the previous two times, said Moton last game. It's a tremendous rivalry between the two schools and the pressure will be at a high pitch. But if we can stop Martin and (Chris) McKinney, then we have a chance to win."

The Flyers are looking for their first regional title since 1984 and their first trip to the state tournament since 1979. On the other hand, Lincoln three in a row. Many think the post-season success of the Tigers will loom large Friday. But Lincoln coach Bennie Lewis tends to disagree.

"We have only two players left (Martin and McKinney) from those state teams," said Lewis. (See FRIDAY, Page 38)

"But things will balance them-selves out because (East St. Lou-is) has some kids from East St. Louis Assumption that have tour-nament experience. Those kids know what the post-season is about and I'm sure they won't be intimidated against us in this game.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF OUR PRECIOUS DAUGHTER JAN SHANKEL FEB. 28, 1975

Meditation is God's way To lighten every burden Helping us to really know God cares when we are hurting. And at this special time each year When our hearts are full of pain We think of how it used to be With our daughter home again.

We cannot live those days again Oh! how we wish we could So we will have to be content And trust God as we should.

For in God's word He promises
A reunion when we too
Will see you in that heavenly home
And spend eternity with you.
